The deadline for submitting applications was Wednesday, May 15, 2013. Mr. Parham has been extended the opportunity to observe the interviews and to be available to answer potential questions of candidates.

JOINT SWCD PROJECT FOR WATERSHED SPECIALIST

It is well established that working directly with private landowners is one the most effective methods to increase conservation practices and projects to improve both land and water. Specifically, the MWCD’s 2005 Amendment to the Official Plan clearly outlines our desire to work with local entities to increase the number of conservation practices on private land that lies within the drainage basin of our reservoirs.

Carroll and Harrison County Soil and Water Conservation Districts have developed a joint project that proposes to create a Watershed Specialist position to work exclusively in the Atwood, Leesville, Tappan and Clendening sub-watersheds. This three-year project will facilitate cooperation with private landowners and other SWCD staff to help install practices that reduce nutrient and sediment run-off through leadership, education, water quality data collection and public outreach. Also, it is expected that this person would work closely with our dredging consultant, URS Corporation, to identify sediment reduction strategies to help extend the life of our dredging program.

Fifteen to eighteen percent of the funding for this position will come from Carroll and Harrison County SWCDs through a combination of in-kind and direct expenditure of local dollars. MWCD’s contribution will be approximately $42,000 a year for a three-year commitment and such funding for this first year is included in the 2013 Conservation Maintenance Assessment budget.

MWCD staff in concert with ODNR Division of Soil and Water Resources program managers has reviewed the project description and believe this concept will be effective and efficient. No action is being requested at this time, but staff will be recommending approval for this joint effort at the July Board of Directors meeting.
